A BRILLIANT DASH.

How the Guerrilla Chieftain. John Morgan, was Caught and Killed. Colonel J. E. Macgowan in the Philadelphia Weekly Times.]

About the time the brigade was concentrated and as the notes were being compared with a view to determine on some plan offoperations against Morgan, a woman from Greenville, dripping with rain and on horseback, was conducted to the spot apart where the General and his officers were consulting. Her name was Bacon. She was an alleged widow, formerly of Ohio. In reality she was an adventuress, an ex-variety actress, anxious Mills, of that place, by St. Jacobs Oil. to cause a sensation, get herself talked She had rheumatism. about among the officers of the armies and mentioned in reports and newspapers. This woman correctly told Gillem the situation at Greenville, Morgan was sleeping at the mansion of Mrs. Williams in the edge of the town and directly on the Bull's Gap road. "Dick" Morgan's regiment was in camp in a field a short distance west of the town, and that side alone was picketed. Duke with the main force, lay nearly a mile east of where Morgan retired for the night. This information gained, Gillem at once ordered Ingerton to proceed to Greenville with his regiment and Newell's battalion. Captain Roberts of the Tenth Michigan, and Captain Wilcox, of the Thirteenth Tennessee, were sent in advance with their companies, the main Cleve, Hillsboro. reconnoitering force taking a more leisurely pace and making a detour to the left so as to get around Dick Morgan's pickets and take his regiment in the rear. Wilcox, who commanded the advance, when within three-quarters of a mile of the village, got a glimps of the confederate reserve picket in the road. He pro- field. posed to Roberts to make a dash through the line and into the town, with a view of surrounding the house where Morgan was in bed, capturing him and his staff and trust to luck to get out. Roberts was ready for any enterprise, and closed eagerly with his superior's daring proposition.

"Forward! Trot! Gallop! Charge!" rang out on the air and on the ears of the startled, astonished, Confederate sentries. They were literally ridden over by the dashing Federals, and before Dick Morgan's subordinate, whom he had left in command got a man in the saddle, the Williams house was surrounded by Williams house was surr gan's subordinate, whom he had left in cox's men. They shot or captured the two or three guards, picked up all the horses and an officer or two in less time than it requires to tell the story.

Morgan was awakened by the shooting and tramping. He got on his breeches, boots and hat, and in his shirt-sleeves, revolver in hand, ran down the long slooping grounds on the east front of the house. In the north-east corner was a grape arbor. As Morgan stooped to pass under this in order to reach the fence, have seen how they helped me, and they used them and are cured, and feel private in Company G, Thirteenth Tennessee Cavalry, who fired on him. The bullet took efect in General Morgan's right side, and ranging upward, on account of his stooping position, passed out pear the heart. He fell and died instant-

Meantime the balance of the officers in and about the house, a few Orderlies and a squad from Dick Morgan's command, were captured and rushed off toward the eastern part of the town. Campbell dismounted from his horse, took a look at the man he killed, recognized him-he was a deserter from Morgan's command -raised the body, threw it over his saddle-bow, remounted and rode away with his companions. They went pell-mell through the town, filed to the right, passed out to the north, bore to the right round the hill where the remains of Andrew Johnson are buried, and, though pretty hotly pursued by a portion of Duke's men, they reached the Bull's Gap road near the point where they had charged the rebel picket a half an hour be-

- "Yes, my son."
- "Was it awful?"
- "Yes." "Did you kill many?"
- "Well, I shouldn't like to answer that question." "Are you very modest, pa?" "I hope I am too modest to brag.

"That was what Mr. Smith meant, then, when he was telling the men down at the drug store that you hadn't any war record to brag of." "He did, eh? Smith is a liar!" "That's what I thought. He told the men that you run so fast he couldn't catch you on horseback, and any boy knows that a horse can catch a man with a stiff knee."

THE CINCINNATI ENQUIRER!

In its columns, the news of the world is given every day in the year. Its two thousand correspond-ents located in every section of this Country and Europe, are the most reliable news gatherers to be had, and the history of each day's events will be faithfully recorded and presented to the public through the Enquirer, free from distortion or prejudice.

through the Enquirer, free from distortion or prejudice.

The province of a newspaper is to record facts, to separate truth from faisehood. How well the Enquirer has succeeded in this duty, we feel a pardonable pride in referring to its files and past record for evidence of its ability and thoroughness in presenting all matters treated upon in their true light.

The people of this age require a paper fully abreast of the times, co equal in enterprise, and material advancement in all mercantile and political interests, such will the Enquirer continue to be. Candor and fairness will be accorded to all questions and parties, but the facts shall never be perverted.

The Immediate Future has in store, matters of grave interest to all, and the general welfare will largely depend upon the influence of those who are fully conversant with facts occuring and to occur. The policy of the government but partially developed by the New Administration, was fast winning the confidence of the people, when the hand of the Assasin placed coutrol of affairs in charge of a faction whose leaders have not at all times received favorable criticisms for their public acts. What the future policy is to be, will be foreshadowed during the first year of President Arthur's administration, and presented to the public, without fear or favor, in the columns of the Enquirer.
